

SAVE BALI DOGS

Help Eradicate the Cruel Treatment of Animals in Indonesia

Protecting animals from cruelty is especially difficult if there are no laws against it, and in Indonesia, sadly this is the case. So the way to change this dire situation is to educate the people.

The Bali Animal Welfare Association (BAWA) is a non-profit charity registered in Indonesia. Their aim is to relieve suffering, control the population and improve the health of Bali's street dogs through medical care, spay/neutering, street-feeding, puppy adoption and education of school children.

To help save Bali dogs Peligquin Publications is donating 10% of every copy of Puri sold to support BAWA. This popular children's book has been promoted through VILTA, the newsletter for Victorian Indonesian language teachers and WILTA, the association for Indonesian language teachers in Western Australia. The book has been distributed to schools all across Australia through Wooldridge's: Australia's leading primary and secondary educational supplier and is distributed throughout Indonesia by Java books. Peligquin Publications is looking to getting the book available in Indonesian schools as the next step in helping to educate the children of Bali the importance in taking care of their dogs.

This is one small step for dog...one giant leap for dogkind!
